1. Radio Bucharest, almost destroyed during World War II was enlarged and restored to complete efficiency in 1949. Necessary equipment was brought from abroad.
2. Radio Rumania, established near the Bod railroad station, 14 kilometers from Stalin (formerly Brasov), has been coordinated with broadcasting stations in the Soviet Union which transmit on long waves. It broadcasts on about 1,870 meters.
3. At Saftica, about halfway between Bucharest and Ploesti, has been established the largest and most modern radio transmitter in Rumania, to be used for propaganda broadcasts. The equipment was furnished by the Telefunken Co.
4. At Peris, on the Bucharest-Ploesti railroad, is located the Free Greek station, used only for broadcasts to Greece.
5. At Scrovistea, near Peris, is located another transmitter, manned by some 300 Soviet officers and men. The only Rumanian personnel are sentinels, who are not, however, allowed to enter the establishment.
